Competency Based Training (CBT) and assessment – An introduction for trainers

Competency

Competency refers to the ability to perform particular tasks and duties to the standard of performance expected in the workplace.

Competency requires the application of specified knowledge, skills and attitudes relevant to effective participation, consistently over time and in the workplace environment.

The essential skills and knowledge are either identified separately or combined.

Knowledge identifies what a person needs to know to perform the work in an informed and effective manner.

Skills describe the application of knowledge to situations where understanding is converted into a workplace outcome.

Attitude describes the founding reasons behind the need for certain knowledge or why skills are performed in a specified manner.

Competency covers all aspects of workplace performance and involves:

- Performing individual tasks
- Managing a range of different tasks
- Responding to contingencies or breakdowns
- Dealing with the responsibilities of the workplace
- Working with others.

Unit of competency

Like with any training qualification or program, a range of subject topics are identified that focus on the ability in a certain work area, responsibility or function.

Each manual focuses on a specific unit of competency that applies in the hospitality workplace.

In this manual a unit of competency is identified as a 'unit'.

Each unit of competency identifies a discrete workplace requirement and includes:

- Knowledge and skills that underpin competency
- Language, literacy and numeracy
- Occupational safety and health requirements.

Each unit of competency must be adhered to in training and assessment to ensure consistency of outcomes.

Element of competency

An element of competency describes the essential outcomes within a unit of competency.

The elements of competency are the basic building blocks of the unit of competency. They describe in terms of outcomes the significant functions and tasks that make up the competency.

In this manual elements of competency are identified as an 'element'.

Performance criteria

Performance criteria indicate the standard of performance that is required to demonstrate achievement within an element of competency. The standards reflect identified industry skill needs.

Performance criteria will be made up of certain specified skills, knowledge and attitudes.

Learning

For the purpose of this manual learning incorporates two key activities:

- Training
- Assessment.

Both of these activities will be discussed in detail in this introduction.

Today training and assessment can be delivered in a variety of ways. It may be provided to participants:

- On-the-job – in the workplace
- Off-the-job – at an educational institution or dedicated training environment
- As a combination of these two options.

No longer is it necessary for learners to be absent from the workplace for long periods of time in order to obtain recognised and accredited qualifications.

Learning approaches

This manual will identify two avenues to facilitate learning:

Competency Based Training (CBT)

This is the strategy of developing a participant's competency.

Educational institutions utilise a range of training strategies to ensure that participants are able to gain the knowledge and skills required for successful:

- Completion of the training program or qualification
- Implementation in the workplace.

The strategies selected should be chosen based on suitability and the learning styles of participants.

Competency Based Assessment (CBA)

This is the strategy of assessing competency of a participant.

Educational institutions utilise a range of assessment strategies to ensure that participants are assessed in a manner that demonstrates validity, fairness, reliability, flexibility and fairness of assessment processes.

Flexibility in learning

It is important to note that flexibility in training and assessment strategies is required to meet the needs of participants who may have learning difficulties. The strategies used will vary, taking into account the needs of individual participants with learning difficulties. However they will be applied in a manner which does not discriminate against the participant or the participant body as a whole.

Catering for participant diversity

Participants have diverse backgrounds, needs and interests. When planning training and assessment activities to cater for individual differences, trainers and assessors should:

- Consider individuals' experiences, learning styles and interests
- Develop questions and activities that are aimed at different levels of ability
- Modify the expectations for some participants
- Provide opportunities for a variety of forms of participation, such as individual, pair and small group activities
- Assess participants based on individual progress and outcomes.

The diversity among participants also provides a good reason for building up a learning community in which participants support each other's learning.

Participant centred learning

This involves taking into account structuring training and assessment that:

- Builds on strengths – Training environments need to demonstrate the many positive features of local participants (such as the attribution of academic success to effort, and the social nature of achievement motivation) and of their trainers (such as a strong emphasis on subject disciplines and moral responsibility). These strengths and uniqueness of local participants and trainers should be acknowledged and treasured
- Acknowledges prior knowledge and experience – The learning activities should be planned with participants' prior knowledge and experience in mind
- Understands learning objectives – Each learning activity should have clear learning objectives and participants should be informed of them at the outset. Trainers should also be clear about the purpose of assignments and explain their significance to participants
- Teaches for understanding – The pedagogies chosen should aim at enabling participants to act and think flexibly with what they know
- Teaches for independent learning – Generic skills and reflection should be nurtured through learning activities in appropriate contexts of the curriculum. Participants should be encouraged to take responsibility for their own learning

- Enhances motivation – Learning is most effective when participants are motivated. Various strategies should be used to arouse the interest of participants
- Makes effective use of resources – A variety of teaching resources can be employed as tools for learning
- Maximises engagement – In conducting learning activities, it is important for the minds of participants to be actively engaged
- Aligns assessment with learning and teaching – Feedback and assessment should be an integral part of learning and teaching
- Caters for learner diversity – Trainers should be aware that participants have different characteristics and strengths and try to nurture these rather than impose a standard set of expectations.

Active learning

The goal of nurturing independent learning in participants does not imply that they always have to work in isolation or solely in a classroom. On the contrary, the construction of knowledge in tourism and hospitality studies can often best be carried out in collaboration with others in the field. Sharing experiences, insights and views on issues of common concern, and working together to collect information through conducting investigative studies in the field (active learning) can contribute a lot to their eventual success.

Active learning has an important part to play in fostering a sense of community in the class. First, to operate successfully, a learning community requires an ethos of acceptance and a sense of trust among participants, and between them and their trainers. Trainers can help to foster acceptance and trust through encouragement and personal example, and by allowing participants to take risks as they explore and articulate their views, however immature these may appear to be. Participants also come to realise that their classmates (and their trainers) are partners in learning and solving.

Trainers can also encourage cooperative learning by designing appropriate group learning tasks, which include, for example, collecting background information, conducting small-scale surveys, or producing media presentations on certain issues and themes. Participants need to be reminded that, while they should work towards successful completion of the field tasks, developing positive peer relationships in the process is an important objective of all group work.

Competency Based Training (CBT)

Principle of Competency Based Training

Competency based training is aimed at developing the knowledge, skills and attitudes of participants, through a variety of training tools.

Training strategies

The aims of this curriculum are to enable participants to:

- Undertake a variety of subject courses that are relevant to industry in the current environment
- Learn current industry skills, information and trends relevant to industry
- Learn through a range of practical and theoretical approaches
- Be able to identify, explore and solve issues in a productive manner

- Be able to become confident, equipped and flexible managers of the future
- Be 'job ready' and a valuable employee in the industry upon graduation of any qualification level.

To ensure participants are able to gain the knowledge and skills required to meet competency in each unit of competency in the qualification, a range of training delivery modes are used.

Types of training

In choosing learning and teaching strategies, trainers should take into account the practical, complex and multi-disciplinary nature of the subject area, as well as their participant's prior knowledge, learning styles and abilities.

Training outcomes can be attained by utilising one or more delivery methods:

Lecture/tutorial

This is a common method of training involving transfer of information from the trainer to the participants. It is an effective approach to introduce new concepts or information to the learners and also to build upon the existing knowledge. The listener is expected to reflect on the subject and seek clarifications on the doubts.

Demonstration

Demonstration is a very effective training method that involves a trainer showing a participant how to perform a task or activity. Through a visual demonstration, trainers may also explain reasoning behind certain actions or provide supplementary information to help facilitate understanding.

Group discussions

Brainstorming in which all the members in a group express their ideas, views and opinions on a given topic. It is a free flow and exchange of knowledge among the participants and the trainer. The discussion is carried out by the group on the basis of their own experience, perceptions and values. This will facilitate acquiring new knowledge. When everybody is expected to participate in the group discussion, even the introverted persons will also get stimulated and try to articulate their feelings.

The ideas that emerge in the discussions should be noted down and presentations are to be made by the groups. Sometimes consensus needs to be arrived at on a given topic. Group discussions are to be held under the moderation of a leader guided by the trainer. Group discussion technique triggers thinking process, encourages interactions and enhances communication skills.

Role play

This is a common and very effective method of bringing into the classroom real life situations, which may not otherwise be possible. Participants are made to enact a particular role so as to give a real feel of the roles they may be called upon to play. This enables participants to understand the behaviour of others as well as their own emotions and feelings. The instructor must brief the role players on what is expected of them. The role player may either be given a ready-made script, which they can memorize and enact, or they may be required to develop their own scripts around a given situation. This technique is extremely useful in understanding creative selling techniques and human relations. It can be entertaining and energizing and it helps the reserved and less literate to express their feelings.

Simulation games

When trainees need to become aware of something that they have not been conscious of, simulations can be a useful mechanism. Simulation games are a method based on "here and now" experience shared by all the participants. The games focus on the participation of the trainees and their willingness to share their ideas with others. A "near real life" situation is created providing an opportunity to which they apply themselves by adopting certain behaviour. They then experience the impact of their behaviour on the situation. It is carried out to generate responses and reactions based on the real feelings of the participants, which are subsequently analysed by the trainer.

While use of simulation games can result in very effective learning, it needs considerable trainer competence to analyse the situations.

Individual /group exercises

Exercises are often introduced to find out how much the participant has assimilated. This method involves imparting instructions to participants on a particular subject through use of written exercises. In the group exercises, the entire class is divided into small groups, and members are asked to collaborate to arrive at a consensus or solution to a problem.

Case study

This is a training method that enables the trainer and the participant to experience a real life situation. It may be on account of events in the past or situations in the present, in which there may be one or more problems to be solved and decisions to be taken. The basic objective of a case study is to help participants diagnose, analyse and/or solve a particular problem and to make them internalize the critical inputs delivered in the training. Questions are generally given at the end of the case study to direct the participants and to stimulate their thinking towards possible solutions. Studies may be presented in written or verbal form.

Field visit

This involves a carefully planned visit or tour to a place of learning or interest. The idea is to give first-hand knowledge by personal observation of field situations, and to relate theory with practice. The emphasis is on observing, exploring, asking questions and understanding. The trainer should remember to brief the participants about what they should observe and about the customs and norms that need to be respected.

Group presentation

The participants are asked to work in groups and produce the results and findings of their group work to the members of another sub-group. By this method participants get a good picture of each other's views and perceptions on the topic and they are able to compare them with their own point of view. The pooling and sharing of findings enriches the discussion and learning process.

Practice sessions

This method is of paramount importance for skills training. Participants are provided with an opportunity to practice in a controlled situation what they have learnt. It could be real life or through a make-believe situation.

Games

This is a group process and includes those methods that involve usually fun-based activity, aimed at conveying feelings and experiences, which are everyday in nature, and applying them within the game being played. A game has set rules and regulations, and may or may not include a competitive element. After the game is played, it is essential that the participants be debriefed and their lessons and experiences consolidated by the trainer.

Research

Trainers may require learners to undertake research activities, including online research, to gather information or further understanding about a specific subject area.

Competency Based Assessment (CBA)

Principle of Competency Based Assessment

Competency based assessment is aimed at compiling a list of evidence that shows that a person is competent in a particular unit of competency.

Competencies are gained through a multitude of ways including:

- Training and development programs
- Formal education
- Life experience
- Apprenticeships
- On-the-job experience
- Self-help programs.

All of these together contribute to job competence in a person. Ultimately, assessors and participants work together, through the 'collection of evidence' in determining overall competence.

This evidence can be collected:

- Using different formats
- Using different people
- Collected over a period of time.

The assessor who is ideally someone with considerable experience in the area being assessed, reviews the evidence and verifies the person as being competent or not.

Flexibility in assessment

Whilst allocated assessment tools have been identified for this subject, all attempts are made to determine competency and suitable alternate assessment tools may be used, according to the requirements of the participant.

The assessment needs to be equitable for all participants, taking into account their cultural and linguistic needs.

Competency must be proven regardless of:

- Language
- Delivery Method
- Assessment Method.

Assessment objectives

The assessment tools used for subjects are designed to determine competency against the 'elements of competency' and their associated 'performance criteria'.

The assessment tools are used to identify sufficient:

- a) Knowledge, including underpinning knowledge
- b) Skills
- c) Attitudes

Assessment tools are activities that trainees are required to undertake to prove participant competency in this subject.

All assessments must be completed satisfactorily for participants to obtain competence in this subject. There are no exceptions to this requirement, however, it is possible that in some cases several assessment items may be combined and assessed together.

Types of assessment

Allocated Assessment Tools

There are a number of assessment tools that are used to determine competency in this subject:

- Work projects
- Written questions
- Oral questions
- Third Party Report
- Observation Checklist.

Instructions on how assessors should conduct these assessment methods are explained in the Assessment Manuals.

Alternative assessment tools

Whilst this subject has identified assessment tools, as indicated above, this does not restrict the assessor from using different assessment methods to measure the competency of a participant.

Evidence is simply proof that the assessor gathers to show participants can actually do what they are required to do.

Whilst there is a distinct requirement for participants to demonstrate competency, there are many and diverse sources of evidence available to the assessor.

Ongoing performance at work, as verified by a supervisor or physical evidence, can count towards assessment. Additionally, the assessor can talk to customers or work colleagues to gather evidence about performance.

A range of assessment methods to assess competency include:

- Practical demonstrations
- Practical demonstrations in simulated work conditions
- Problem solving
- Portfolios of evidence
- Critical incident reports
- Journals
- Oral presentations
- Interviews
- Videos
- Visuals: slides, audio tapes
- Case studies
- Log books
- Projects
- Role plays
- Group projects
- Group discussions
- Examinations.

Recognition of Prior Learning

Recognition of Prior Learning is the process that gives current industry professionals who do not have a formal qualification, the opportunity to benchmark their extensive skills and experience against the standards set out in each unit of competency/subject.

Also known as a Skills Recognition Audit (SRA), this process is a learning and assessment pathway which encompasses:

- Recognition of Current Competencies (RCC)
- Skills auditing
- Gap analysis and training
- Credit transfer.

Assessing competency

As mentioned, assessment is the process of identifying a participant's current knowledge, skills and attitudes sets against all elements of competency within a unit of competency. Traditionally in education, grades or marks were given to participants, dependent on how many questions the participant successfully answered in an assessment tool.

Competency based assessment does not award grades, but simply identifies if the participant has the knowledge, skills and attitudes to undertake the required task to the specified standard.

Therefore, when assessing competency, an assessor has two possible results that can be awarded:

- Pass Competent (PC)
- Not Yet Competent (NYC).

Pass Competent (PC)

If the participant is able to successfully answer or demonstrate what is required, to the expected standards of the performance criteria, they will be deemed as 'Pass Competent' (PC).

The assessor will award a 'Pass Competent' (PC) if they feel the participant has the necessary knowledge, skills and attitudes in all assessment tasks for a unit.

Not Yet Competent' (NYC)

If the participant is unable to answer or demonstrate competency to the desired standard, they will be deemed to be 'Not Yet Competent' (NYC).

This does not mean the participant will need to complete all the assessment tasks again. The focus will be on the specific assessment tasks that were not performed to the expected standards.

The participant may be required to:

- a) Undertake further training or instruction
- b) Undertake the assessment task again until they are deemed to be 'Pass Competent'.

1.1 Identify and assess opportunities for engagement with sponsorship activities

Lagae defines sponsorship as ‘a business agreement between two parties. The sponsor provides money, goods, services or know-how. In exchange, the sponsored party (individual, event or organisation) offers rights and associations that the sponsor utilizes commercially” (Lagae 2005, p. 35).

Sponsorship objectives

- Creating promotional opportunities
- Improving community relations
- Fostering favourable brand and company associations
- Creating entertainment opportunities
- Gaining publicity

Slide 5

Slide No	Trainer Notes
5.	According to Jobber (2007) there are five major principals of sponsorship objective. These objectives include creating promotional opportunities, improving community relations, fostering favourable brand and company associations, creating entertainment opportunities and gaining publicity. Trainer explains each of these objectives and provides examples: • Trainer asks trainees for examples of each

Slide

Linking sponsorship with promotional tools

Slide 6

Slide No	Trainer Notes
6.	As new ideas emerge in relation to marketing and advertising, it has become common to link sponsorship with other promotional tools as can be seen in the diagram below. (Buhler & Nufer 2010, p. 99). Trainer explains how sponsorship can link in with promotional activities. Trainer could bring examples from major brands linking with events (Coca-cola, Pepsi, Nike) like major sporting events.

Slide

Sponsorship objectives

When companies commit themselves to sponsoring certain activity, they should always have clear reasons and objectives for their actions. Sponsorship goals should always be linked to promotional objectives and in a wider sense to the marketing objectives of the organization (Shank 2009, p. 333).

Indirect and direct sponsorship objectives.

Slide 7

Slide No	Trainer Notes
7.	Trainer introduces slide and explains the need for sponsorship objectives. Trainer elicits indirect and direct sponsorship objectives from Trainee manual (TM). Trainer asks trainees to read through the aspects of sponsorship initiatives and discuss each part.

Slide

1.2 Develop a budget for sponsorship activities

The sponsorship activity budget is a projection (forecast) of the income and expenditure that the event will incur based on plans made and information gathered.

The preparation of a budget is an essential part of sponsorship initiative management. It is fundamentally important to be able to predict with reasonable accuracy whether the activity will result in a profit, a loss or will break-even.

Slide 8

Slide No	Trainer Notes
8.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria. Trainees discuss their experience of budgets and share with the group. Trainer presents what a budget is using information from below. A budget: • Is a quantified statement of plan where the plan is expressed in numerical terms • Process includes costing and estimating income • Includes the allocation of financial resources to be used to compare costs and revenues with projected costs and revenues and to calculate maximum possible expenditure for each area of an event or activity • Can take many forms.

Slide

Budget process

Slide 9

Slide No	Trainer Notes
9.	- Trainer presents the budget process - Trainer goes through the budget notes, budget line items, examples of budgets to consider, need for budgets from the TM with trainees - Trainer explains the aspects of budget considerations for sponsorship activities - Determine and set financial parameters for engagement with sponsorship activities. This may include reviewing previous sponsorship activities and identifying costs versus benefits - Determine non-financial support that may be made available to partners, including use of enterprise staff, use of facilities, information and knowledge sharing, joint advertising and promotion, provision of free and/or discounted products and services. It is important to evaluate the costs associated with providing access to the enterprise operation as this sponsorship activity may require a lot of support which may negatively impact on regular operations - Schedule engagement with sponsorship opportunities to align with relevant cash flow restrictions. Identifying appropriate times to engage in sponsorship activities is critical for the success of the event. It is not effective to schedule a sponsorship activity when cash flow is limited or when normal operations are at a peak

	• Establish internal budgets and resource allocation protocols so as to not negatively impact on regular operations • Notify internal personnel regarding limitations placed on sponsorships. There may be limits on budget set by management or scheduling guidelines that may influence when sponsorship events can take place.

Slide

1.3 Determine the criteria for participating in sponsorship activities

- Before setting guidelines for sponsorship activity participations, it is useful to consider some ideas that may impact on the activities success or failure
- Will sponsorship dilute the organisation's operations?
- Communications activity should exist outside any sponsorship/partnership support. Sponsorship marketing should be used only to enhance the operations – not to create them. Sponsorship marketing activity is also likely to be more successful as part of a wider awareness-raising campaign that incorporates other media activity
- Could there be any justifiable cause for complaint – from either the public or the media – if the sponsorship/partnership goes ahead?

Slide 10

Slide No	Trainer Notes
10.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria. Trainer presents the slide and explains each point. Trainees identify why these points are important for the organisation. Trainer instructs trainees to read through the parameters for selecting sponsorship activities. Trainees discuss each point in groups.

Slide

1.4 Consider alternatives to participation in sponsorship

When considering participation in sponsorship activities it is important to evaluate the effectiveness of the event versus other marketing options such as:

- Existing promotion strategies
- Enhancing public relations
- Lowering selling price
- Developing new products and services

Slide 11

Slide No	Trainer Notes
11.	Trainer presents the slide and elicits why alternatives to sponsorship may be more effective for an organisation using information from the TM. Trainees complete the activity from TM Activity In small groups, discuss the alternatives listed and any others you can think of. Which alternative is the best option in your opinion?

Slide

1.5 Seek support from suppliers and service providers for sponsorship activities

Potential partners in the activity could include:

- Staff
- Owners
- Customers and clients
- Suppliers
- Service providers
- Government and industry bodies
- Local community

Slide 12

Slide No	Trainer Notes
12.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria. Trainer asks trainees to identify different organisations or people that could participate in the activity. Trainer asks students How could each of these groups or people support the activity.

Slide

Seeking support process

Slide 13

Slide No

Trainer Notes

13.

Trainer presents the slide and explains the process:

It may be effective to follow a step by step process in order to gather support from different stakeholders. It is important to know what is required for the sponsorship activity before approaching suppliers and service providers in order to be clear about what they could do to assist the activity. It may be useful to prioritise the support needed as well.

Trainees complete the activity:

List all of the stakeholders connected to your organisation. What kind of support could they provide for sponsorship activities?

Slide

1.6 Establish protocols for monitoring participation in sponsorship activities

Establishing protocols:

- Identifying staff and/or external agencies to track the use of resources supplied.
- Establishing internal records to record the results of involvement in individual sponsorship activities
- Preparing internal forms and systems to facilitate tracking the type and volume of resources committed to, and provided for, sponsorship activities
- Undertaking scheduled visits to sites and events where sponsorship has been provided
- Archiving evidence of the exposure and mention that the organisation receives as a result of its engagement with every sponsorship activity

Slide 14

Slide No	Trainer Notes
14.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria. Trainer explains the necessity of developing systems and protocols for engagement in sponsorship events. It is important to identify what is happening during the event, who is doing what, any issues or highlights, and to keep records of this information.

Slide

1.7 Set criteria against which to evaluate effectiveness, and return from, sponsorship activities

It is possible to approach sponsorship activity evaluation from two perspectives:

- Public relations approach
- Advertising and marketing approach

Slide 15

Slide No	Trainer Notes
15.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and presents the two approaches in the slide. Trainer uses information in the TM to explain the meaning of each approach. Trainer introduces the information from the TM about considering the management process in evaluation (See below): • Vanity - the selection of measures that make management look good. • Provincialism - keeping within organizational or industry boundaries when new measures are needed • Narcissism - measuring from one's own point of view, not that of the customer • Laziness - assuming one knows what to measure without giving it thought • Pettiness - measuring a small subset of what should be measured • Inanity - measuring without thought of how measurement or actions based on it will influence the organization • Frivolity - not being serious about measuring.

Slide

Criteria for evaluating effectiveness

Ambler et al (2002) describes five customer marketing changes that could be used to measure sponsorship effectiveness which include:

- Brand awareness
 - Brand associations
- Brand attitudes
- Brand attachment
- Brand experience

Slide 16

Slide No	Trainer Notes
16.	• Trainer goes through the information from the TM and explains each measurement parameter: ▪ Brand awareness - the extent and ease to which customers recall and recognise the brand and can identify the products and services with which it is associated ▪ Brand associations - the strength, favourability, and uniqueness of perceived attributes and benefits for the brand and firm ▪ Brand attitudes - overall evaluations of the brand in terms of its quality and the satisfaction it generates ▪ Brand attachment - how loyal the customer feels toward the brand. ▪ Brand experience - the extent to which customers use the brand; talk to others about the brand; seek out brand information, promotions, and events • Trainer asks trainees to read through the information in their TMs about performance measurements and trainer elicits each aspect including KPI's.

Slide

1.8 Identify products and services that may be developed to align with sponsorship activities

Identifying and developing products and services that align with sponsorship activities could include:

- ◉ Modifying existing products and services
- ◉ Introducing new products, services or packages to align with the event
- ◉ Developing one-off products and services only available to coincide with the sponsorship event or activity.
- ◉ Re-titling of packages to reflect the sponsorship activity
- ◉ Partnering other businesses in creating a joint venture product
- ◉ Providing a discount for purchasers participating

Slide 17

Slide No	Trainer Notes
17.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and elicits the way that products and services could be incorporated into a sponsorship activity. Trainees consider their organisation's products and services and how they could align with sponsorship events.

Slide

1.9 Determine how requests for sponsorship that cannot be accommodated will be refused

Slide 18

Slide No	Trainer Notes
18.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and explains the need for organisation's to prepare polite ways to refuse sponsorship applications. Trainer asks trainees to read through information in TMs. State your reason for declining. If you give the sponsorship partner a valid reason for declining – i.e. budget reasons, schedule conflict, etc. — it will be easier for them to empathise and to take “no” for an answer without putting you on their blacklist. It may be appropriate to start by thanking them for considering the organisation, then follow that up with an apologetic reason why the enterprise is unable to take part. An example form of this would be along the lines of: “Regrettably, we are unable to participate in your event at this time due to [insert your reason here].”

Slide

Preparing for refusing sponsorship applications

In determining how to refuse sponsorship requests, it may be necessary to consider:

- Preparing standard 'thanks and regret' letters identifying the other activities that the organisation engages in
- Explaining how the application for sponsorship does not meet the identified criteria of the business
- Working with applicants to re-formulate their application or activity in order for it to qualify for sponsorship
- Appointing and training personnel to deal with such instances
- Identifying a supplementary contribution that may be
- Ensuring the negative response of the organisation leaves a positive result in the eyes of the individual or organisation making the request

Element 2: Develop sponsorship packages

Performance criteria:

- 2.1 Identify the elements of a sponsorship package that the organisation is prepared to support
- 2.2 Identify the products and services that may be offered as sponsorship
- 2.3 Define organisational expectations in relation to expected returns for different sponsorship packages
- 2.4 Identify the input required by the organisation into sponsorship arrangements
- 2.5 Develop and disseminate sponsorship information to potential partners

Slide 20

Slide No	Trainer Notes
20.	Trainer introduces the element and performance criteria and explains assessment processes and due dates.

Slide

2.1 Identify the elements of a sponsorship package that the organisation is prepared to support

Four common sponsorship packages include:

- Level playing field: where each sponsor is given equal rights and benefits
- Hierarchical: which is based upon the amount paid
- Sole: where the one sponsor has access to all rights and benefits
- Ad hoc: this is where each package provides different benefits to the sponsors and varying returns to the sponsoree

Slide 21

Slide No	Trainer Notes
21.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and trainees read through the introduction in their TMs. Trainer goes through the information in the slide and explains each type of package. Trainees read through the next section about choosing parts of sponsorship packages. Trainer facilitates and elicits each aspect. Trainees provide examples of their own organisation's sponsorship packages if available.

Slide

2.2 Identify the products and services that may be offered as sponsorship

An organisation could provide products and services such as:

- Financial assistance, including cash contributions, discounts, and rebates
- Merchandising items such as bags, caps, pens, t-shirts featuring company name and/or logo
- Advertising material, including posters, banners and various point-of-sale materials
- Tours, trips, packages and other products or services from the offerings available
- Advice and information
- Personnel to assist with the planning and/or conduct of the sponsored event

Trainer introduces the performance criteria and trainees read through the introduction in their TMs. Trainer goes through the slide with trainees and asks students to list the main products and services that their organisation offers. Trainees discuss how these products and services could be used in sponsorship activities.

Slide

2.3 Define organisational expectations in relation to expected returns for different sponsorship packages

Slide 23

Slide No	Trainer Notes
23.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and students read through the introduction in their TMs. Trainer asks students in small groups to identify what organisation's may expect from engaging in sponsorship activities. Trainees read through the information in their TMs and trainer answers any questions as required. Nominating the types of packages available, such as Gold, Silver or Bronze. Prescribing the total value of each package. Nominating the products and services that are included in each package. Describing and quantifying organisational expectations in relation to the provision of each package, in relation to sales, contacts made, general public exposure, media exposure, naming rights, product placement, size, type and placement of host enterprise promotional material, and absence of industry competitors, or requirements regarding proximity of competitors to host enterprise materials. Explaining to organisers exactly what the sponsorship covers and exactly what it is expected to achieve for the business. Identifying the provision of complementary invitations to the event or activity, including seats, meals and tickets for use by the host enterprise and seats for distribution to other clients.

Slide

2.4 Identify the input required by the organisation into sponsorship arrangements

The amount of input required for a sponsorship activity can vary quite significantly ranging from little or no input to active involvement in all aspects of the event. Input could include:

- Zero
- Planning and implementation
- Promotional material and product placement
- Deciding whether to include competitors in the activity

Slide 24

Slide No	Trainer Notes
24.	Trainer asks trainees to read through the introduction. Trainer elicits the varying amounts of input that may be required from an organisation. Trainer asks "What factors would impact on the amount of input provided by the organisation?" Possible answers: cost, availability of staff and resources, size of the event, expected returns from participation in the event (big returns may require more input). Trainees provide their own ideas and trainer elicits information from the TM.

Slide

2.5 Develop and disseminate sponsorship information to potential partners

It is necessary to provide information to potential partners that could include:

- Preparing hard copy information that explains to targeted individuals and organisations what sponsorship is available from the host enterprise
- Forwarding sponsorship information kits to strategically targeted event and activity organisers
- Explaining sponsorship availability and requirements in response to enquiries generated
- Encouraging event organisers to apply for sponsorship

Slide 25

Trainer explains the importance of communicating with potential partners and that this networking can help the organisation gain more benefits from the activity by increasing exposure and market reach. Trainer reminds students about work project due dates.

Slide

Element 3: Implement Sponsorship Packages

Performance criteria includes:

- 3.1 Confirm the details of the sponsorship the organisation is prepared to offer
 - 3.2 Confirm the return the organisation will receive for its sponsorship
 - 3.3 Negotiate additional opportunities as a result of the initial sponsorship
 - 3.4 Complete contracts in relation to the sponsorship

Slide 27

Slide No	Trainer Notes

Slide

3.1 Confirm the details of the sponsorship the organisation is prepared to offer

When conforming sponsorship activity details, it is important to confirm:

- Identification and description of all levels of sponsorship offered by the organisation – this refers to how the different sponsorship levels are classified (in effect, ‘packages’) that will be offered

Slide 28

Slide No	Trainer Notes
28.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and students read through the introduction. Trainer explains different packages. Most sponsorship events seem to offer three levels (high, medium and low) each with names indicating their relative position in the overall scheme – for example: • Gold, silver and bronze • Platinum, gold and silver • Blue, red and white • Mega, major and minor. Trainer elicits Period of sponsorship – aligning each level with a time period, Identifying costs of providing benefits in benefit packages Trainees read through the costs and discuss the details with the trainer.

Slide

3.1 Confirm the details of the sponsorship the organisation is prepared to offer

When confirming the details of the sponsorship it may be necessary to include:

- Clarifying elements of existing sponsorship packages
- Negotiating variations to standard sponsorship packages
- Meeting with event organisers, boards and committees

Slide 29

Slide No	Trainer Notes
29.	Trainer elicits information in the slide highlighting the need to be clear with details so that no disagreements occur later.

Slide

3.2 Confirm the return the organisation will receive for its sponsorship

Eight stages of the 'The Sponsorship Unit Relationship Model':

- The Attraction – between the two parties
- The Approach – where one party introduces themselves to the other
- Courting – where the schmoozing occurs
- Proposal – where 'the question' is asked
- Engagement – where a positive answer to the question is received
- Marriage – where the contract is signed and the benefits start flowing
- Affairs – where you/the Club looks for other sponsors, and/or your sponsor looks for other sponsorees
- Divorce – where the relationship ends

Slide 30

Slide No	Trainer Notes
30.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and elicits the Sponsorship Unit Relationship Model. You could mix up the definitions and ask students to match the stage with the correct definition without students looking at their TMs.

Slide

Benefits and returns for the organisation

Options for benefits can include:

- Naming rights
- Hospitality
- Signage and banners
- Tickets/seats/attendance
- Access to staff, celebrities and officials
- Participation by staff in advertisement
- Media appearances by staff/management
- Product placement
- Logos and sponsor name on uniforms, tickets, programmes, marketing materials
- Exclusivity

Slide 31

Slide No	Trainer Notes
31.	Trainer goes through the information in the slide and elicits meaning for each benefit. Trainer asks students to read through the confirmation section in their TMs and Trainer elicits the need to confirm details with sponsorship organisers to be clear. Trainer goes through each detail with students using the TM to explain: • Obtaining verification that the expected outcomes for the host enterprise will be forthcoming • Quantifying and fully describing expectations of the host enterprise • Adjusting expectations in accordance with feedback and/or information received from the organiser, including increasing, decreasing or substituting expectations • Explaining the host enterprise objectives in relation to the sponsorship being considered • Advising organisers that the identified returns to the host enterprise are expected to form part of a legally binding agreement that will be entered into between the two parties.

Slide

3.3 Negotiate additional opportunities as a result of the initial sponsorship

It is important to maintain positive relationships with sponsorship organisers in order to:

- Encourage their cooperation with you
- Motivate them to continue, extend or increase engagement with other activities
- Send a positive message to competitors who may be watching
- Facilitate a harmonious working relationship
- Help 'smooth over' the inevitable 'bumps in the road' which often emerge as part of such a relationship
- Keep promises you have made about your orientation to the relationship

Slide 32

Slide No	Trainer Notes
32.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and explains the importance of maintaining good relationships with sponsorship organisers as per information on the slide. Trainer elicits examples of additional opportunities that could be negotiated as information below from TM. Some of the opportunities that could be negotiated could include: • Exclusivity for future events • Increased signage, advertising and media exposure • Reduced cash contributions • Part-payment for facility and equipment use • Major sponsor package • Increased benefits and access for staff and customers • Discounts and promotional rates for other products and services.

Slide

3.4 Complete contracts in relation to the sponsorship

What is a contract?

Slide 33

Slide No	Trainer Notes
33.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and asks students to define what a contract is. (A formal agreement which is legally binding.) Trainer elicits why contracts are important using the information from the TM. Your need to use a formal written contract: • So everyone knows exactly what the other party is thinking, what they want and what they have agreed to provide – something in writing is just a lot more convenient and provides a lot more surety about what was intended when the deal was made/negotiations occurred • In order for management and legal advisors to have something to scrutinise and approve or make suggestions about in relation to amendments which may need to be considered/made • To have a permanent copy of the arrangements which were made – so it can be referred to throughout the life of the contract to: ▪ Guide action ▪ Enable monitoring of performance ▪ Clarify issues arising. Trainer presents information about effects of entering into contracts and verbal contracts from the TM.

Slide

3.4 Complete contracts in relation to the sponsorship

Possible contract details could include:

- It does not contain anything you do not agree to
- It does not contain anything you do not understand
- It only commits you to doing what you want to do/are prepared to do for the support you are getting
- It commits the sponsor/organisers to doing what they believe they have promised they will do
- The duration of the contract (start and finish dates for the sponsorship) are what you thought they would be
- It has been approved by management and legal advisors before they are signed
- It has been signed by the appropriate people representing both parties

Slide 34

Slide No	Trainer Notes
34.	Trainer presents the slide and elicits information. Trainer explains that it is common for sponsorship contracts to set out clearly all the following details as a basic minimum: • An outline of what the sponsorship relates to – this may be the name of the organisation, the fact the sponsorship is for a certain project,/purpose or event • The explicit responsibilities of both parties – there is no comprehensive list of what this may encompass because responsibilities will have been the subject of negotiation and always relate directly to the nature, term and value of the relationship/contract/package • Trainees read through the common inclusions section of their TMs and trainer supports students as required.

Slide

3.4 Complete contracts in relation to the sponsorship

Contracts should also list expected benefits such as:

- Number of times a hospitality tent will be provided, maximum guests to attend, sample food and beverage menus, number of service staff, hours of operation
- Number, size, wording and placement of signage
- Number and type of tickets to be provided including specifications of games, venues, competitions this applies to
- Number, and duration, of meetings with staff, management, celebrities or nominated people
- Merchandise which can be displayed and/or sold
- Commitment by the organisers to purchase specified products/services from the sponsor
- Exclusivity arrangements, or restrictions applying to certain other companies/sponsors in order to optimise benefit to the sponsor

Slide 35

Slide No	Trainer Notes
35.	Trainer goes through the slide with students and trainees provide any other ideas that could relate to the expected benefits from engaging in the event. Financial obligations should also be included and detailed. A glossary of terms might be included as well to ensure that all parties understand contract details.

Slide

3.5 Brief staff in relation to the sponsorship deal that has been entered into

- For the event to be successful it is essential to inform all relevant people about the details of the activity
- Failure to inform people effectively could negatively impact on the overall success of the event which could lead to missed opportunities for the organisation

Slide 36

Slide No	Trainer Notes
36.	Trainer explains the importance of informing relevant staff about sponsorship activity details. Trainees read through information in their TMs and discuss any situations in which communication in the workplace was not effective. What was the result of the poor communication? What information may be needed to be shared with staff involved in the sponsorship activity? Various answers will be appropriate and trainer facilitates discussion.

Slide

3.6 Participate actively and willingly in the sponsored event/activity

Actively participating in the activity could include:

- Supporting event organisers with requests
- Operating specialist equipment
- Helping guests and participants with directions
- Identifying any potential issues or problems
- Smiling and being friendly towards all participants
- Completing tasks and roles promptly and efficiently
- Making sure all utilised areas are safe, clean and easily accessible
- Displaying and distributing advertising or marketing materials as per organisational requirements

Slide 37

Slide No	Trainer Notes
37.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and explains the need for activity participants to be enthusiastic and supportive of the event. Trainer elicits that the event is a marketing activity for the organisation so it is important to present a good image in order to achieve the expected outcomes from participating in the activity.

Slide

3.7 Ensure the terms and conditions of the sponsorship agreement are discharged

Checking agreed terms and conditions are being met could include:

- Providing resources as identified in the contract, including products, services and other advice, assistance and information
- Ensuring relevant quantities are provided
- Ensuring supply dates are complied with
- Checking spaces are organised and set-up as agreed
- Communicating with event organisers that agreed actions are being administered as per the contract conditions
- Providing mechanisms for staff and participants to be able to advise of any issues with their ability to complete tasks as required

Slide 38

Slide No	Trainer Notes
38.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and elicits the importance of making sure contract terms and conditions are met. Failure to do so could lead to penalties for the organisation or organisers and this may negatively impact on the outcomes. Trainer also explains the need to be familiar with contract terms and conditions.

Slide

3.8 Monitor the application of sponsorship contributions, as previously established

Whilst a sponsorship activity or event is underway, it is necessary to have people monitor the progress of the activity. This could include:

- Meeting with organisers
- Visiting and observing events and sites
- Monitoring media
- Reviewing contract terms and conditions
- Taking remedial action where required

Slide 39

Slide No	Trainer Notes
39.	Trainer explains the importance of monitoring the activity or event and that observing the event progress and gathering evidence or examples of action is critical for the success of the activity and future events. Trainer asks students to identify examples of what could be monitored during a sponsorship activity.

Slide

3.9 Record results and outcomes of participation in the sponsorship, as previously determined

No matter what the KPI's are, it is important that all relevant data is collected and stored effectively in order to provide an opportunity for evaluation of the overall performance of the sponsorship activity.

results

Slide 40

Slide No	Trainer Notes
40.	Trainer asks students to read through the introduction in their TMs. Trainer asks students to brainstorm what data and evidence needs to be gathered and how it could be recorded. Trainer goes through information from TM: • Taking still and moving photographic images/records of the event and ancillary activities • Filing hard copy documentation relating to the sponsored event, including media articles, media advertising, periodic reports, feedback sheets, market research data • Recording statistical results in accordance with identified key performance indicators. Trainer might bring in some examples of KPIs, targets and expected outcomes from other organisations. There are many examples on the internet of enterprise expectations from sponsorship activities. Trainer reminds students of work project and assessment due dates.

Slide

Element 4: Evaluate involvement in the sponsorship

Performance criteria:

- 4.1 Assess the outcomes and results of the sponsorship against predetermined KPIs
- 4.2 Seek feedback on the sponsorship activity or event
- 4.3 Provide feedback to the organiser of the sponsorship event or activity
- 4.4 Determine whether similar sponsorship involvement will occur

Managing the measurement process:

- Vanity - the selection of measures that make management look good
- Provincialism - keeping within organizational or industry boundaries when new measure are needed
- Narcissism - measuring from one's own point of view, not that of the customer
- Laziness - assuming one's knows what to measure without giving it thought
- Pettiness - measuring a small subset of what should be measured
- Inanity - measuring without thought of how measurement or actions based on it will influence the organization
- Frivolity - not being serious about measuring

Feedback needs to be collected from various sources and as was shown in the previous unit, it needs to be analysed and evaluated unemotionally. There may be a lot of people to speak to when collecting feedback but it must be planned for and gathered in order to support future activities.

Slide

4.3 Provide feedback to the organiser of the sponsorship event or activity

It is important to provide appropriate feedback to the event organisers so they can respond and improve future activities. Providing feedback may include:

- Providing hard and soft data regarding the effects of the sponsorship on the organisation
- Meeting with those involved to discuss the general implementation of the event

46.	Trainer introduces the performance criteria and explores the ideas in the slide. If the relationship works then it may be worth considering future collaboration or if the outcomes of the event were achieved, then participating in future events may be a good marketing opportunity. It is important to examine the partnership and see if it is effective in promoting the organisation's products and services.
