Competency Based Training (CBT) and assessment - An introduction for trainers

Competency

Competency refers to the ability to perform particular tasks and duties to the standard of performance expected in the workplace.

Competency requires the application of specified knowledge, skills and attitudes relevant to effective participation, consistently over time and in the workplace environment.

The essential skills and knowledge are either identified separately or combined.

Knowledge identifies what a person needs to know to perform the work in an informed and effective manner.

Skills describe the application of knowledge to situations where understanding is converted into a workplace outcome.

Attitude describes the founding reasons behind the need for certain knowledge or why skills are performed in a specified manner.

Competency covers all aspects of workplace performance and involves:

- Performing individual tasks
- Managing a range of different tasks
- Responding to contingencies or breakdowns
- Dealing with the responsibilities of the workplace
- Working with others.

Unit of Competency

Like with any training qualification or program, a range of subject topics are identified that focus on the ability in a certain work area, responsibility or function.

Each manual focuses on a specific unit of competency that applies in the hospitality workplace.

In this manual a unit of competency is identified as a 'unit'.

Each unit of competency identifies a discrete workplace requirement and includes:

- Knowledge and skills that underpin competency
- Language, literacy and numeracy
- Occupational safety and health requirements.

Each unit of competency must be adhered to in training and assessment to ensure consistency of outcomes.

Element of Competency

An element of competency describes the essential outcomes within a unit of competency.

The elements of competency are the basic building blocks of the unit of competency. They describe in terms of outcomes the significant functions and tasks that make up the competency.

In this manual elements of competency are identified as an 'element'.

Performance criteria

Performance criteria indicate the standard of performance that is required to demonstrate achievement within an element of competency. The standards reflect identified industry skill needs.

Performance criteria will be made up of certain specified skills, knowledge and attitudes.

Learning

For the purpose of this manual learning incorporates two key activities:

- Training
- Assessment.

Both of these activities will be discussed in detail in this introduction.

Today training and assessment can be delivered in a variety of ways. It may be provided to participants:

- On-the-job – in the workplace
- Off-the-job – at an educational institution or dedicated training environment
- As a combination of these two options.

No longer is it necessary for learners to be absent from the workplace for long periods of time in order to obtain recognised and accredited qualifications.

Learning Approaches

This manual will identify two avenues to facilitate learning:

Competency Based Training (CBT)

This is the strategy of developing a participant's competency.

Educational institutions utilise a range of training strategies to ensure that participants are able to gain the knowledge and skills required for successful:

- Completion of the training program or qualification
- Implementation in the workplace.

The strategies selected should be chosen based on suitability and the learning styles of participants.

Competency Based Assessment (CBA)

This is the strategy of assessing competency of a participant.

Educational institutions utilise a range of assessment strategies to ensure that participants are assessed in a manner that demonstrates validity, fairness, reliability, flexibility and fairness of assessment processes.

Flexibility in Learning

It is important to note that flexibility in training and assessment strategies is required to meet the needs of participants who may have learning difficulties. The strategies used will vary, taking into account the needs of individual participants with learning difficulties. However they will be applied in a manner which does not discriminate against the participant or the participant body as a whole.

Catering for Participant Diversity

Participants have diverse backgrounds, needs and interests. When planning training and assessment activities to cater for individual differences, trainers and assessors should:

- Consider individuals' experiences, learning styles and interests
- Develop questions and activities that are aimed at different levels of ability
- Modify the expectations for some participants
- Provide opportunities for a variety of forms of participation, such as individual, pair and small group activities
- Assess participants based on individual progress and outcomes.

The diversity among participants also provides a good reason for building up a learning community in which participants support each other's learning.

Participant Centred Learning

This involves taking into account structuring training and assessment that:

- Builds on strengths – Training environments need to demonstrate the many positive features of local participants (such as the attribution of academic success to effort, and the social nature of achievement motivation) and of their trainers (such as a strong emphasis on subject disciplines and moral responsibility). These strengths and uniqueness of local participants and trainers should be acknowledged and treasured
- Acknowledges prior knowledge and experience – The learning activities should be planned with participants' prior knowledge and experience in mind
- Understands learning objectives – Each learning activity should have clear learning objectives and participants should be informed of them at the outset. Trainers should also be clear about the purpose of assignments and explain their significance to participants
- Teaches for understanding – The pedagogies chosen should aim at enabling participants to act and think flexibly with what they know
- Teaches for independent learning – Generic skills and reflection should be nurtured through learning activities in appropriate contexts of the curriculum. Participants should be encouraged to take responsibility for their own learning
- Enhances motivation – Learning is most effective when participants are motivated. Various strategies should be used to arouse the interest of participants

- Makes effective use of resources – A variety of teaching resources can be employed as tools for learning
- Maximises engagement – In conducting learning activities, it is important for the minds of participants to be actively engaged
- Aligns assessment with learning and teaching – Feedback and assessment should be an integral part of learning and teaching
- Caters for learner diversity – Trainers should be aware that participants have different characteristics and strengths and try to nurture these rather than impose a standard set of expectations.

Active Learning

The goal of nurturing independent learning in participants does not imply that they always have to work in isolation or solely in a classroom. On the contrary, the construction of knowledge in tourism and hospitality studies can often best be carried out in collaboration with others in the field. Sharing experiences, insights and views on issues of common concern, and working together to collect information through conducting investigative studies in the field (active learning) can contribute a lot to their eventual success.

Active learning has an important part to play in fostering a sense of community in the class. First, to operate successfully, a learning community requires an ethos of acceptance and a sense of trust among participants, and between them and their trainers. Trainers can help to foster acceptance and trust through encouragement and personal example, and by allowing participants to take risks as they explore and articulate their views, however immature these may appear to be. Participants also come to realise that their classmates (and their trainers) are partners in learning and solving.

Trainers can also encourage cooperative learning by designing appropriate group learning tasks, which include, for example, collecting background information, conducting small-scale surveys, or producing media presentations on certain issues and themes. Participants need to be reminded that, while they should work towards successful completion of the field tasks, developing positive peer relationships in the process is an important objective of all group work.

Competency Based Training (CBT)

Principle of Competency Based Training

Competency based training is aimed at developing the knowledge, skills and attitudes of participants, through a variety of training tools.

Training Strategies

The aims of this curriculum are to enable participants to:

- Undertake a variety of subject courses that are relevant to industry in the current environment
- Learn current industry skills, information and trends relevant to industry
- Learn through a range of practical and theoretical approaches
- Be able to identify, explore and solve issues in a productive manner

- Be able to become confident, equipped and flexible managers of the future
- Be 'job ready' and a valuable employee in the industry upon graduation of any qualification level.

To ensure participants are able to gain the knowledge and skills required to meet competency in each unit of competency in the qualification, a range of training delivery modes are used.

Types of Training

In choosing learning and teaching strategies, trainers should take into account the practical, complex and multi-disciplinary nature of the subject area, as well as their participant's prior knowledge, learning styles and abilities.

Training outcomes can be attained by utilising one or more delivery methods:

Lecture/Tutorial

This is a common method of training involving transfer of information from the trainer to the participants. It is an effective approach to introduce new concepts or information to the learners and also to build upon the existing knowledge. The listener is expected to reflect on the subject and seek clarifications on the doubts.

Demonstration

Demonstration is a very effective training method that involves a trainer showing a participant how to perform a task or activity. Through a visual demonstration, trainers may also explain reasoning behind certain actions or provide supplementary information to help facilitate understanding.

Group Discussions

Brainstorming in which all the members in a group express their ideas, views and opinions on a given topic, is a free flow and exchange of knowledge among the participants and the trainer. The discussion is carried out by the group on the basis of their own experience, perceptions and values. This will facilitate acquiring new knowledge. When everybody is expected to participate in the group discussion, even the introverted persons will also get stimulated and try to articulate their feelings.

The ideas that emerge in the discussions should be noted down and presentations are to be made by the groups. Sometimes consensus needs to be arrived at on a given topic. Group discussions are to be held under the moderation of a leader guided by the trainer. Group discussion technique triggers thinking process, encourages interactions and enhances communication skills.

Role Play

This is a common and very effective method of bringing into the classroom real life situations, which may not otherwise be possible. Participants are made to enact a particular role so as to give a real feel of the roles they may be called upon to play. This enables participants to understand the behaviour of others as well as their own emotions and feelings. The instructor must brief the role players on what is expected of them. The role player may either be given a ready-made script, which they can memorize and enact, or they may be required to develop their own scripts around a given situation. This technique is extremely useful in understanding creative selling techniques and human relations. It can be entertaining and energizing and it helps the reserved and less literate to express their feelings.

Simulation Games

When trainees need to become aware of something that they have not been conscious of, simulations can be a useful mechanism. Simulation games are a method based on "here and now" experience shared by all the participants. The games focus on the participation of the trainees and their willingness to share their ideas with others. A "near real life" situation is created providing an opportunity to which they apply themselves by adopting certain behaviour. They then experience the impact of their behaviour on the situation. It is carried out to generate responses and reactions based on the real feelings of the participants, which are subsequently analysed by the trainer.

While use of simulation games can result in very effective learning, it needs considerable trainer competence to analyse the situations.

Individual /Group Exercises

Exercises are often introduced to find out how much the participant has assimilated. This method involves imparting instructions to participants on a particular subject through use of written exercises. In the group exercises, the entire class is divided into small groups, and members are asked to collaborate to arrive at a consensus or solution to a problem.

Case Study

This is a training method that enables the trainer and the participant to experience a real life situation. It may be on account of events in the past or situations in the present, in which there may be one or more problems to be solved and decisions to be taken. The basic objective of a case study is to help participants diagnose, analyse and/or solve a particular problem and to make them internalize the critical inputs delivered in the training. Questions are generally given at the end of the case study to direct the participants and to stimulate their thinking towards possible solutions. Studies may be presented in written or verbal form.

Field Visit

This involves a carefully planned visit or tour to a place of learning or interest. The idea is to give first-hand knowledge by personal observation of field situations, and to relate theory with practice. The emphasis is on observing, exploring, asking questions and understanding. The trainer should remember to brief the participants about what they should observe and about the customs and norms that need to be respected.

Group Presentation

The participants are asked to work in groups and produce the results and findings of their group work to the members of another sub-group. By this method participants get a good picture of each other's views and perceptions on the topic and they are able to compare them with their own point of view. The pooling and sharing of findings enriches the discussion and learning process.

Practice Sessions

This method is of paramount importance for skills training. Participants are provided with an opportunity to practice in a controlled situation what they have learnt. It could be real life or through a make-believe situation.

Games

This is a group process and includes those methods that involve usually fun-based activity, aimed at conveying feelings and experiences, which are everyday in nature, and applying them within the game being played. A game has set rules and regulations, and may or may not include a competitive element. After the game is played, it is essential that the participants be debriefed and their lessons and experiences consolidated by the trainer.

Research

Trainers may require learners to undertake research activities, including online research, to gather information or further understanding about a specific subject area.

Competency Based Assessment (CBA)

Principle of Competency Based Assessment

Competency based assessment is aimed at compiling a list of evidence that shows that a person is competent in a particular unit of competency.

Competencies are gained through a multitude of ways including:

- Training and development programs
- Formal education
- Life experience
- Apprenticeships
- On-the-job experience
- Self-help programs.

All of these together contribute to job competence in a person. Ultimately, assessors and participants work together, through the 'collection of evidence' in determining overall competence.

This evidence can be collected:

- Using different formats
- Using different people
- Collected over a period of time.

The assessor, who is ideally someone with considerable experience in the area being assessed, reviews the evidence and verifies the person as being competent or not.

Flexibility in Assessment

Whilst allocated assessment tools have been identified for this subject, all attempts are made to determine competency and suitable alternate assessment tools may be used, according to the requirements of the participant.

The assessment needs to be equitable for all participants, taking into account their cultural and linguistic needs.

Competency must be proven regardless of:

- Language
- Delivery Method
- Assessment Method.

Assessment Objectives

The assessment tools used for subjects are designed to determine competency against the 'elements of competency' and their associated 'performance criteria'.

The assessment tools are used to identify sufficient:

- a) Knowledge, including underpinning knowledge
- b) Skills
- c) Attitudes

Assessment tools are activities that trainees are required to undertake to prove participant competency in this subject.

All assessments must be completed satisfactorily for participants to obtain competence in this subject. There are no exceptions to this requirement, however, it is possible that in some cases several assessment items may be combined and assessed together.

Types of Assessment

Allocated Assessment Tools

There are a number of assessment tools that are used to determine competency in this subject:

- Work projects
- Written questions
- Oral questions
- Third Party Report
- Observation Checklist.

Instructions on how assessors should conduct these assessment methods are explained in the Assessment Manuals.

Alternative Assessment Tools

Whilst this subject has identified assessment tools, as indicated above, this does not restrict the assessor from using different assessment methods to measure the competency of a participant.

Evidence is simply proof that the assessor gathers to show participants can actually do what they are required to do.

Whilst there is a distinct requirement for participants to demonstrate competency, there are many and diverse sources of evidence available to the assessor.

Ongoing performance at work, as verified by a supervisor or physical evidence, can count towards assessment. Additionally, the assessor can talk to customers or work colleagues to gather evidence about performance.

A range of assessment methods to assess competency include:

- Practical demonstrations
- Practical demonstrations in simulated work conditions
- Problem solving
- Portfolios of evidence
- Critical incident reports
- Journals
- Oral presentations
- Interviews
- Videos
- Visuals: slides, audio tapes
- Case studies
- Log books
- Projects
- Role plays
- Group projects
- Group discussions
- Examinations.

Recognition of Prior Learning

Recognition of Prior Learning is the process that gives current industry professionals who do not have a formal qualification, the opportunity to benchmark their extensive skills and experience against the standards set out in each unit of competency/subject.

Also known as a Skills Recognition Audit (SRA), this process is a learning and assessment pathway which encompasses:

- Recognition of Current Competencies (RCC)
- Skills auditing
- Gap analysis and training
- Credit transfer.

Assessing competency

As mentioned, assessment is the process of identifying a participant's current knowledge, skills and attitudes sets against all elements of competency within a unit of competency. Traditionally in education, grades or marks were given to participants, dependent on how many questions the participant successfully answered in an assessment tool.

Competency based assessment does not award grades, but simply identifies if the participant has the knowledge, skills and attitudes to undertake the required task to the specified standard.

Therefore, when assessing competency, an assessor has two possible results that can be awarded:

- Pass Competent (PC)
- Not Yet Competent (NYC)
- Pass Competent (PC).

If the participant is able to successfully answer or demonstrate what is required, to the expected standards of the performance criteria, they will be deemed as 'Pass Competent' (PC).

The assessor will award a 'Pass Competent' (PC) if they feel the participant has the necessary knowledge, skills and attitudes in all assessment tasks for a unit.

Not Yet Competent' (NYC)

If the participant is unable to answer or demonstrate competency to the desired standard, they will be deemed to be 'Not Yet Competent' (NYC).

This does not mean the participant will need to complete all the assessment tasks again. The focus will be on the specific assessment tasks that were not performed to the expected standards.

The participant may be required to:

- a) Undertake further training or instruction
- b) Undertake the assessment task again until they are deemed to be 'Pass Competent'.

	• Promoting designated aspects of the prospects, such as dining, bars, sports facilities, entertainment, house facilities (laundry, cleaning, repairs, secretarial, child minding, translator, room service), in room facilities (mini bar, movies, internet, safe deposits) • Offering to reserve table at in-house dining facilities • Opening guest room • Carrying luggage into room and placing same in accordance with guest wishes • Checking operational readiness of all in room equipment, items and facilities • Explaining in room facilities and demonstrating in room features to guests, such as lights, television, telephone, air conditioning, curtains, message systems • Wishing guests a pleasant stay. Enterprise policies and procedures for luggage handling should relate to: • Luggage marking and tagging systems • Carrying capacities for luggage trolleys • Specified routes to be taken when moving luggage through public areas • Observing enterprise limitations and restrictions regarding areas into which guest luggage may not be taken • Safe manual handling procedures for handling luggage, including designated requirements for bending, carrying, lifting, loading and unloading trolleys, loading and unloading luggage from vehicles, specific procedures for dealing with 'heavy', 'very heavy' and 'fragile' items • Placement of luggage within guest rooms • Handling protocols for dealing with group arrivals and departures. Guest requests for help when departing may include: • Folding clothes and packing luggage • Obtaining special requests to assist guests with packing, such as cardboard, foam, paper, extra bags.

	Transport luggage for departing guests may include: • Moving luggage to reception • Placing luggage into storage • Loading luggage into/onto vehicles for departure and transfers • Weighing guest luggage • Assisting guests to mail/send extra luggage and items home. In-house guest luggage storage facilities may include: • Tagging guest luggage and giving guest their claim tag • Physically placing items into luggage storage areas • Providing for the security of stored luggage • Overseeing luggage claims by guests • Ensuring guest luggage and luggage contents are not damaged in storage. Room service requests may relate to: • Assisting in the movement of room service trolleys to guest room • Assisting in room service set up and presentation • Assisting in room service clearing. General fetching and carrying duties may include: • Carrying supplies and stock from stores to departments • Responding to in room guest requests for extra or special items • Carrying change to bars and other cash points.

	Emergency cleaning requirements may relate to: • Spot cleaning • Cleaning up spills and public area accidents, mess and damage. Back-fill in departments and service areas may relate to: • Providing short-term relief for operational staff who have been temporarily allocated to other duties • Assisting in times of high demand • Filling in for staff who have been injured or had to leave work due to illness or other pressing reasons. Manage difficult patrons may include: • Using progressive intervention steps • Involving other staff to assist • Using physical control tactics. Mail and messages may include: • Physical delivery of messages and mail to rooms • Placing mail and messages into guest pigeon holes • Following up mail and messages to ensure guest received them • Posting items on behalf of guest • Processing charges for mail to guest account. Transport for guests during their stay may include: • Advising on public transport options • Arranging a hire car • Arranging limousine service

	• Providing local maps and information on transport options • Booking local tours and trips. In-house guest information/directories may relate to: • Obtaining general tourist information and making it readily available • Preparing specialised half-day and one-day trips for guests with special and general interests • Updating contents of directories to keep them current and relevant to guest profiles. Guest requests for advice may include providing advice, information and recommendations on a variety of topics such as: • Tourist attractions • Dining options • Transport • Local culture • Religious and historic points of interests • Gardens and parks • Medical and emergency contacts • Churches and religious services • Nightlife • Personal services • Making phone calls and enquiries on behalf of guests • Maintaining guest privacy and confidentiality.

	Assessment Guide The following skills and knowledge must be assessed as part of this unit: • The enterprise's policies and procedures in regard to guest service delivery • Appropriate written, verbal and non-verbal communication, interpersonal guest service and rapport building skills • Negotiation and problem solving skills • Liaison skills with internal and external providers • Research and acquisition skills to source items requested by guests • Problem solving abilities to resolve guest issues • Ability to act as agent for the guest. Linkages To Other Units • Develop and update local knowledge • Maintain hospitality industry knowledge • Manage and resolve conflict situations • Promote hospitality products and services • Promote products and services to customers • Receive and resolve customer complaints • Provide advice to patrons on food and beverage services • Manage intoxicated persons • Provide information about in-house services • Provide for the safety of VIPs • Communicate on the telephone.

	Critical Aspects of Assessment Evidence of the following is essential: • Demonstrated ability to provide a nominated range of support services to designated departments within the host enterprise • Demonstrated ability to assist individual guests on arrival which must include assistance with luggage, escorting to rooms and presentation and explanation of in room facilities and features • Demonstrated ability to assist groups of guests on arrival which must include assistance with luggage, escorting to rooms and presentation and explanation of in room facilities and features • Demonstrated ability to assist individual guests on departures which must include assistance with luggage and on departure needs as required • Demonstrated ability to assist groups of guests on departures which must include assistance with luggage and on departure needs as required. Context of Assessment Assessment must ensure: • Actual or simulated workplace delivery of a nominated range of bell boy/porter services and support activities. Resource Implications Training and assessment must include the use of real or simulated establishment facilities, procedures, documentation and guests. Assessment Methods The following methods may be used to assess competency for this unit: • Observation of practical candidate performance • Role plays • Oral and written questions • Third party reports completed by a supervisor • Project and assignment work.
--	---

	Key Competencies in this Unit Level 1 = competence to undertake tasks effectively Level 2 = competence to manage tasks Level 3 = competence to use concepts for evaluating
	Key Competencies	Level	Examples
	Collecting, organising and analysing information	2	Research in-house and local information; prepare in-house service directories
	Communicating ideas and information	2	Speak with guests; explain in room features and facilities; provide concierge advice and information
	Planning and organising activities	1	Respond to guest requests for assistance
	Working with others and in teams	2	Assist co-workers in the delivery of guest and customer services
	Using mathematical ideas and techniques	1	Count and weigh guest luggage
	Solving problems	1	Deal with guest complaints; resolve lost luggage issues; meet guest requests
	Using technology	1	Use electronic key systems; use computerised reservation systems

Porters are the people who

- Greet guests as they arrive at the venue
- Manage guests' luggage
- Provide general information services
- Provide valet services (car parking)
- Act as a central point of contact for groups
- Are called uniformed staff because their uniforms are of military style and they are the only staff permitted to wear uniforms outside of the Hotel in working hours

Slide 5

5.	Porters' duties include: • Meeting and Greeting the guest, and assisting with luggage • Rooming the Guest; showing them how their room operates, location of light switches, environmental controls • Luggage management • Marketing the areas of the Hotel or resort including in house businesses and services • Taking messages or mail for in house guests. • Solving guest's problems and queries about local and recreational facilities. In some venues staff are multi-skilled and cross-trained, meaning that several different jobs will be performed by the same person. For example: • The concierge and the porter can be the same person • Doorman duties may be shared by the porters or concierge person • Sometimes porters share front desk duties and staff the reservations section.

Presentation of a porter

To achieve a good first impression the porter must be:

- Well presented
- Friendly, welcoming, and courteous
- Organised and efficient
- Able to communicate clearly and accurately with guests

7.	The porter is often the first point of contact for the guest when arriving at an accommodation establishment. It is therefore important for the porter to create a good first impression. To achieve a good first impression the porter must be: • Well presented • Friendly, welcoming, and courteous • Organised and efficient • Able to communicate clearly and accurately with the guests. A porter's presentation will have a lasting impression on the guest and it is important that this impression be of the highest standard at all times. Note the use of the words "at all times" –a porter must look as presentable five minutes before they finish, as they did when they started. How staff stand and move reflects on the image of their personal presentation, be aware of posture, body language and the speed of movement. A porter should move with dignity and purpose Remember that a uniform, as well as personal grooming and deportment, completes the physical side of a porters professional and personal presentation.

8.	As overlap in the roles of concierges and porters may often occur, take note of Les Clefs d'Or. This society is a worldwide organisation of concierges. It was started in France in 1952 by the head porter of a large Parisian hotel with the aim of uniting all hotel porters in an association based on friendship, solidarity and fraternity. Today, all around the world, the crossed keys are proudly worn on the lapels of concierges and their assistants. Class activity Why is a concierge who is a member of the Society of the Golden keys important to a Hotel's prestige?

Communicating with guests

- Good manners and etiquette are important to give an instant impression of respect
- Porters conduct themselves in a professional manner
- Act politely, show courtesy and correct etiquette

Slide 11

Slide No	Trainer Notes
11.	The first impression of the establishment is often affected by the way the guest is greeted. The use of effective and appropriate non-verbal communication (body language). It is critical that the message sent by the body language is in-keeping with the verbal message sent. Class activity Identify non-verbal gestures that could be used to direct guests to: • Greet the guests • Through the front door • Reception desk to check in • Into the lift or elevator. Porters need to be well prepared and ready when greeting guests, able to give prompt and courteous service. Be aware of cultural and behavioural conventions including the use of honorific and social etiquette. Establishing a relation and connection with the guest that is characterised by agreement and harmony is important. To achieve these outcomes when communicating with the guest, the valet must always: • Conduct themselves in a professional manner • Act politely

	• Show courtesy • Demonstrate correct etiquette at all times: etiquette can be described as manners, decorum and propriety – etiquette is the set of customary rules for behaviour in polite society • Speak clearly and concisely • Use the guest's name at all times • Be truthful at all times • Exhibit a constant willingness to assist. • Maintaining confidentiality is an absolute requirement for a valet: it is 100% non-negotiable • Preparation for very important people (VIP) – which may involve the need for additional security, special gifts in the room, a guided tour of the property. Class activity Meet and greet practical role play with students establishing how to greet guests from different cultural background commonly travelling to your area as tourist or business.

- Arrival date and departure date
- Estimated time of arrival (ETA)
- Guest's name
- Number of guests
- Room type
- Room rate booking guaranteed or not
- Special requests

Slide 13

Slide No	Trainer Notes
13.	Accommodation establishments generally have an Arrivals List. The Arrivals List provides information to many departments, one of which is uniformed Staff, where it assists the porter in efficiently completing his or her tasks. Whether the Arrivals List is manually or computer generated, the information found on it must always be treated in the strictest of confidence and should never be left unattended for public viewing. Information found on an Arrivals List may vary from establishment to establishment, but can be expected to include: • Arrival date • Departure date • Estimated time of arrival (ETA) • Estimated time of departure (ETD) • Guest's name • Number of guests • Room type • Room rate • Booking guaranteed or not • Special requests.

	The Arrivals List is a necessary tool in the planning undertaken to receive guests. It helps to inform management and staff as follows: • Staffing Levels – determining the number of porters required to meet shift demands • Planning of daily tasks – identifying the busy versus quiet times • Prepare for group arrivals – such as tours • Preparation of special requests – which may include items such as preparing for guests with a physical disability, a request for champagne on arrival in the room, a fruit platter, or a cot in the room • Organising luggage storage areas – especially for large groups of guests who may be on a tour, or who have all come off a recently landed plane.

Arrange for and deliver special requests

Special requests may include:

- Extra furniture or beds
- Bed linen
- Food and Beverage
- Flowers and decorations

Slide 14

Slide No	Trainer Notes
14.	The front office usually takes these special requests, with the original booking of the room or face-to-face with guests at check in or during their stay. The actual filling of these special requests requires a team effort and frequently it is the porter who is required to assist in ensuring special requests are fulfilled in accordance with requirements and establishment procedure and policies. Use the internet to check the special requirements published for entertainment celebrities.

Slide

Greeting guests on arrival

The type of greeting the guest receives from the porter must always be:

- Professional
- Personable
- Welcoming
- Sincere
- Friendly

Slide 15

Slide No	Trainer Notes
15.	The porter should ensure every guest receives a welcoming and professional greeting when arriving at the establishment. Remember that the porter is usually the first representative of the establishment who meets face-to-face with the guest and this meeting can therefore have a lasting impression. The moment the porter identifies a guest, they should immediately acknowledge them and not wait for the guest to make the first move. The type of greeting the guest receives from the porter must always be: • Professional • Personable • Welcoming • Sincere • Friendly. In all instances, the verbal greeting/welcome offered must conform to any establishment policies or directives, but will generally contain: • The establishment's name • The guest's name or title if appropriate • An offer of assistance.

	The porter's desk – or the “bell desk” as it is also known because it traditionally has a bell to summon portering staff – is usually strategically positioned in the lobby. This is so the porter has a clear view of the entrance to enable them time to prepare themselves to greet guests, and so guests can also be seen by the reception staff in case they are needed: this arrangement also provides good security as a spin-off benefit. Once the guests have been greeted, they should be directed to the reception area to register, as this is a legal requirement. The porter will assist guests with their luggage and walk with them to the reception area. Once there, the porter should introduce the guest to the reception staff, if the guests' names are known. On other occasions, the porter will only guide the guests in the direction of the reception, while remaining at their post.

Escorting the guest

Rooming the guest:

- Advise the guest of the venue's emergency evacuation procedure
- Answer any questions the guest may have
- Highlight facilities and services available in the venue
- Discuss upcoming events in the town

Slide 16

Slide No	Trainer Notes
16.	Escorting guests to their rooms is an important role played by the porter. It allows the porter time to: • Interact with the guest • Provide them with information about establishment facilities • Sell the restaurants, bars, spa, other hotel facilities • Provide details of tourist attractions, thus encouraging the guests to stay an extra night. Once check-in has been completed, the porter receives the room key from the receptionist, collects guest luggage, and then escorts the guests to their room. When escorting the guest to their room, remember to: • Speak clearly and concisely • Answer questions accurately, or inform the guest that you will seek out the answer and get back to them • Be courteous and polite • Never voice your opinions on issues unrelated to the establishment • Keep the conversation professional and on a positive note • Walk at a comfortable pace to suit the guest • Ascertain if this is the guest's first time at the hotel: if it is, try to sell facilities of the property.

Slide 18

Slide No	Trainer Notes
18.	Throughout a shift there will be many times when the porter must assist guests with their luggage. Luggage may have to be removed from the boot of a car or from the compartments in a tour bus. Luggage should also be treated as an item of great value and never be left unattended, particularly outside the hotel entrance. Occupational Safety and Health; Luggage can be heavy – sometimes very, very, heavy – and therefore the porter must be aware of some basic occupational safety and health issues regarding handling luggage, including: • Test the weight of bags before lifting – give them a test lift • Adopt the correct posture for lifting • Keep the back straight • Bend the knees • Lift the luggage. Use an approved trolley if luggage is too heavy to lift comfortably and correctly. If more than one item is to be placed on the trolley, the heaviest bags should be placed on the bottom and the lighter ones near the top. If an item is too heavy to pick up, the vertical trolley should be used as the porter will not have to personally lift the bags.

	In some establishments, specific routes for the trolleyed transportation of guest luggage have been identified: these should be adhered to where they apply. Likewise, some establishments have procedures for where certain luggage should be placed within rooms – articles on hangers may have to be hung up, suitcases to be put onto the appropriate racks, briefcases next to the bed, and so on: these must be adhered to with every guest in every room, unless the guest requests something else.

Guest Departure

On departure, the porter is likely to:

- Collect luggage from the guests room
- Collect the guest car
- Arrange for other transport (if required)
- Forward mail
- Provide information
- Provide directions

Slide 20

Slide No	Trainer Notes
20.	When a guest is ready to check-out of their room, the porter will be required to assist the guest with their luggage. The porter will usually be advised as to how much luggage has to be moved and the approximate weight of the luggage. A trolley may frequently be needed. The porter should arrive at the room in plenty of time to ensure that guests achieve their stated aim – if there is one (such as catching a certain plane, being away by a certain time, etc): it must be remembered that guests can get very anxious at check-out too. Upon arriving at the guest's room, the porter should knock on the guest's door and announce him or herself. On being invited into the room, the porter should inquire as to the whereabouts of the luggage and the number of items, some will be quite obvious but some might be in the bedroom, the lounge or even the bathroom, also check for forgotten items. In some cases, where there are shops within the complex, guests may even want you stop by one of the shops to pick up a package. Sometimes the guest will accompany the porter to the reception area, where the guest will check-out. The porter will then move the guest's luggage to a private car, taxi, or tour bus. On other occasions, the porter will be asked to take the luggage down to the reception area or storage area and the guest will check-out later.

	In this case, the porter needs to tag the luggage and store it in the Porter's Room or the Luggage Room. In some properties the room has bay numbers, e.g., Bay One, Bay Two etc. and this number is recorded on the guest's luggage tag for easy retrieval upon check-out. The rules about transporting luggage – mentioned earlier – apply at this phase of the guest's stay too.

Slide

Luggage tags

Luggage is often tagged with an identification label is attached to the handle of every piece of luggage.

- The identification label will have written on it the guest's full name and the room number
- When tagging bags, always write the number of items being stored, belonging to that guest, on the tag
- This is an important procedure so that guest's luggage does not get lost

Slide 21

Slide No

Trainer Notes

21.

Most accommodation establishments have luggage labels.

The tag will indicate:

- Whose luggage it is (guest name)
- Guests room number
- Group name (if appropriate)
- Number of pieces
- Type of luggage.

The porter should always use luggage labels to write the guest's name and room number on as soon as this is known. The label should then be attached immediately to the guest's luggage.

It is most important for the porter to ensure that all luggages are labelled accurately.

Sending the wrong luggage to the wrong room causes annoyance, poor guest relations, and embarrassment and has the potential to lead to theft, and breaches of privacy.

Luggage itself should never be actually marked.

Luggage should have a tag attached. This tag may be a two-part type where one-half of the tag is attached to the luggage, and the other portion is given to the guest for them to use when claiming the luggage.

Other tags simply register the name of the guest whose luggage it is, together with the total number of items stored: in some cases the guest is asked to provide an approximate time of pick-up so that the porter can determine where in the Luggage Room to physically store the items.

Some establishments utilise an alpha storage system whereby items are stored in alphabetical order (using the guest's surname as the indicative letter); some will use a system based on given pick-up times.

Class activity

Design a luggage tag and role play with students greeting guests and filling out and attaching the tag to luggage items.

In-house luggage storage systems vary between establishments, usually in terms of their size, location and documentation used.

Luggage storage systems (Luggage Rooms) are places where guests can store their luggage before they are roomed, or after they have departed their room.

In some cases, the guest may have arrived at, say 6am, only to find there is no vacant room: guests are still occupying them, and/or dirty rooms have not been cleaned and notified as “room ready”. In such cases, the establishment may register the guest (because they know a room will become vacant for them), offer them a free breakfast while they wait, and store their tagged luggage in the Luggage Room.

The first appropriate room that becomes vacant will be allocated to them, the porter notified, and the luggage delivered.

In another example, a guest may depart their room at 9.45am and be leaving town that evening at 6pm on a cruise: they may ask that their luggage is kept for them until 2pm to enable them to go and do some shopping before they pick it up and head off to the wharf.

- The Luggage Room would be used for this type of safe storage
- Enterprise procedures for storing items in the Luggage Room focus on security
- Each item is tagged and contains the guest’s name and usually the total number of items lodged for storage
- Some form of documentation – perhaps half of a tear-off slip – is given to the guest to facilitate the retrieval of the luggage

- When the guest returns to collect their luggage they are required to provide identification before being supplied with their luggage
- Where identification has been lost – management should be called immediately to resolve the problem
- Luggage will be transported by porters as required – either to the room, or to the external pick-up area/car park.

At the time of arrival, a guest's room may not be ready. To give the guest the freedom to leave the venue without the inconvenience of holding onto their luggage, the venue will store it for them.

Guest may not require some items in their Room, e.g. sporting equipment, Items not needed for this section of the guests journey

Conversely, at the time of departure, the guest may be required to vacate the room by 11.00 am but not due to leave the town until that evening. Again, the venue will store the guest's luggage for them until required.

23.	Groups arrival Bus arrives and luggage is unloaded and transported by the driver and/or porter to designated area. (such as a special group check-in reception area) • The porter counts and records the luggage on the group file • Receptionist checks Rooming Lists and all relevant information for correctness and smooth check-in process • Luggage is tagged by the porter • Porter obtains Rooming List and places room numbers on tags • Luggage is distributed to the different floors/rooms. Groups departure Shortly before the group's departure, the porter collects luggage from rooms at allocated times (some hotels prefer luggage to be left outside the room for time saving reasons) • Porters collect luggage • Luggage is counted and checked against Rooming List to ensure every piece is accounted for • Luggage is loaded onto the bus by porters.

Where a group is storing luggage, the marking and storing will take this into account – perhaps by using a colour-coded tag – this is not only a benefit to the guests but also speeds things up for porters when they are trying to identify appropriate luggage.

In some establishments, porters may be specifically tasked to deal with luggage from a group: they are dedicated to this task and, as such, can render more personal, thorough and careful service.

If a large group is checking out and there is not enough space in the Porter's Room or Luggage Room, then the following three possibilities may apply:

- Luggage is placed in a hotel room (it is called a hospitality room). Some establishments will charge 50% of the room rate for such a service
- Baggage is positioned in one corner of the lobby and it is roped off. A thick rope goes through all the handles on the luggage so that nothing can go missing
- Baggage is positioned in one corner of the lobby and it is netted. This is when a large net, similar to fishing net, is placed over the top of the luggage and secured tightly.
